

★ Nominated for the 2003 Arthur Ellis Award for Best Nonfiction ★

DARK PATHS, COLD TRAILS

How a Mountie Led the Quest to Link Serial Killers to Their Victims

Dark Paths, Cold Trails is the true story of some of Canada's most notorious and lesser-known serial killers and rapists, and their victims; a policing community struggling to cope with a new kind of sexual predator; and a high-tech solution combining behavioral analysis, psychological and geographic profiling, forensic psychiatry and serial-crime linkage.

Dark Paths, Cold Trails revisits the Clifford Olson case, the trigger for the RCMP to develop a better way to stop serial criminals. It details how MacKay's profiling skills helped lead police to identify Paul Bernardo as "The Scarborough Rapist" and the schoolgirl killer in Burlington and St. Catharines, Ontario.

Destined to become a much talked-about book on a little-known Canadian story, Dark Paths, Cold Trails is absorbing true crime reading.

"Like many Mounties, Ron MacKay was once cynical about the use of computers and the FBI's profiling techniques to find and convict serial killers. Today he is an internationally known criminal profiler, the pioneer of Canada's celebrated ViCLAS computer linkage system and the engaging hero of this entertaining and valuable book." – Stevie Cameron

DARK PATHS, COLD TRAILS
How a Mountie Led the Quest to Link Serial Killers to Their Victims

ISBN 0006391400
$22.95 Trade Paperback
16 pp black-and-white photographs
352 pages; 6 x 9 Carton Quantity: 32

About the author

DOUG CLARK is a freelance journalist whose work has appeared in publications such as The Globe and Mail, Saturday Night, Maclean's and The Toronto Star. He is the author of Unkindest Cut: The Torso Murder of Selina Shen; Billion $$$ High, an examination of the illegal drug trade in North America; and Heart to Heart, an insider's look at heart surgery for patients and their families. Doug Clark lives in Ottawa.

Available from HarperCollinsCanadaLtd
Tel: 1-800-387-0117 Local: 416-321-2241

Or through your local bookseller